THE BRIEF

We engaged with the estates department at Gower College Swansea to redesign the layout of its Tycoch campus, a base for students studying a wide variety of vocational courses.

Teaming up with architects Faithful+Gould, we were presented with architectural drawings and specifications that allowed our design team to design & space plan each individual area: on the ground floor, the coffee shop, atrium and reception areas, and on the first floor, computer labs.

We were briefed to keep the feel of the areas clean and fresh, helping to create an inspiring learning environment.

THE RESULT

Our team of interior designers worked closely with the estates department to deliver fresh and funky product choices across the site. We were conscious there was a budget to stick to but we didn't compromise on the high end finish that the college deserved.

Our extensive supply chain meant we were able to source all of the loose furniture and a bespoke reception counter. The overall room layouts were considered and designed to create different zones, allowing students to work in an agile fashion and use the space for studying in multiple styles. We supplied traditional desking and chairs, but also designed booth seating for more private discussions to help break up the sound scape.
